From the Cincinnati Commercial.] THE PRIVATE LIFE OF WASHINGTON.

JAMES G. HATCHITT. P. M.

It was John Adams who wrote, as late as the year 1813, "the impious idolatry to Washington destroyed all character." The allusion was to the period of his own administration, when he took the Presidency incumbered, as he thought, with the hyperbolical veneration which had been felt for his predecessor. On the other hand, Jefferson, writing in 1814, summed up the estimate which he had deliberately formed of Washington, in these words:

"His mind was great and powerful, without being of the first order, and, as far as be saw, no judgment was ever sounder. It was slow in operation, but sure in conclusion. He was in-capable of fear. Perhaps the strongest feature in his character was prudence. His integrity was most pure, his justice the most inflexible I have ever known, no motives of interest or consanguinity, of friendship or hatred, being able to bias his decision. He was, indeed, in every sense of the word a wise, a good, and great man. His temper was naturally irritable and high-toned, but reflection and resolution had obtained a firm and habitual ascendancy over it. If ever, however, it broke its bonds he was most tremendous in his wrath. heart was not warm in its affections. His colloquial talents were not above mediocrity, possessing neither copiousness of ideas nor fluency of words. In public, when called on for a sudden opinion, he was unready, short, and embarrassed. Yet he wrote readily, rather diffusely, in an easy and correct

This masterly analysis of Washington's character, by the most subtle and penetrating intellect of his times, and one who had known him intimately for thirty years, may be ac cepted with the more confidence as it comes from the head of an opposite school of politics. No difference of opinion, however wide and irreconcilable, could prevent Jefferson from doing impartial justice to the great qualities of Washington.

Some characteristic traits in the daily habit of this first of Presidents may be here noted as derived from a variety of scattered sources Washington was always particular and remark ably neat in his personal apparel. During hi Presidency he usually wore a full black velvet suit, with silk stockings, and shoes with buckles of shining silver. His hair was powdered and tied in an elegant black queue be hind. He kept extraordinarily early hours making it his practice as well in the Presi dency as in the army and at Mount Vernon, to rise at 4 o'clock in the morning, and to retire to bed at 9. He had a healthy man's enjoyment of the pleasures of the table. Though at no time of his life of convivial habits, he liked the cheerful converse of the social board, an at dinner (which he had always punctual; served at 3 o'clock), he drank to the health of every person present, giving as his one in-variable toast: "All our friends." He ate heartily, but was not particular in his diet, except as to fish, of which he was very fond, and he always ate codfish for his Saturday's din ner, having formed an attachment to that ar ticle of diet from the deliciously cooked fish he found in Boston during the New England campaign. He drank home-made beer, with four to five glasses of Madeira wine, every day at dinner. He indulged in no games of chance except when required to make up a party at whist, in playing for a trifle. In his earlier life he was fond of dancing, and the last time he danced a minuet was at a great ball at Fredericksburg, Virginia, in 1781, in honor of the French and American officers returning from the triumphant siege at Yorktown. To bacco, in all its forms, Washington abhorred. He was not fond of music, nor did he either

The finest horseman of his day, Washington always spent much of his time in the saddle He had a love for a fine horse, and his care to secure animals of the most spirited breed, and to have them always scrupulously well groomed, was a marked trait in his character. The vicious propensities of any horse he might mount were of no moment to this skillful an daring rider. He always said that he required Hart, but one good quality in a horse-to go along Breckinridge, and ridiculed the idea that he could ever be Larue, unhorsed, provided the animal kept on his Nelson, egs. While President, his stables were on Minor street, below Sixth, and he kept ten Washington, fine bays and two white chargers. The latter Green. always had their hoofs blacked and polished Boyle, before the General would mount for a ride. Lincoln, After the horses were groomed he would test the thoroughness of the stable boys by applying a muslin handkerchief to their glossy coats; if the slightest stain was visible upon the white handkerchief, woe to the unlucky wight who had slighted his proper duty. When he took out Mrs. Washington for a drive, they rode in a beautiful cream-colored coach, of English build, with six spanking bay Gallatin.

Nothing so aggravated Washington's natually quick temper as neglect of duty or want of punctuality. Col. Pickering relates that on occasion of a Cabinet meeting, the General was likely to be detained by the shoe-black beyond the exact time. The Secretaries in proceeding to the appointed room for the meeting had to been to the appointed room for the meeting, had to pass a small chamber where the President's boots were to have been placed by a certain moment. As Pickering entered he observed Washington in a stooping posture, holding the servant, and belaboring him stoutly with his boots. He would always be up by daylight, and his first care was to visit his stables to see how the borses were credited. and his first care was to visit his stables to see how the horses were cared for. On one such occasion, he found that the coach-horses, which had come home late, had not had their legs rubbed down, the mud being still on them. The General was seen by one who informed Mrs. Robert Morris, to seize his German coachman, and to fisticuff him in the yard with a good drubbing.

Elliott,

The English officers after the war were all loud in their praise of Washington's admirable jul, 15 td and commanding grace on horseback, and it was a common remark that he and his horse moved as but one.

The countenance of Washington never softened nor changed its habitual gravity. At these levees he stood always in On and after May 14th, 1871, trains will front of the fire-place, with his face toward the door of entrance. The visitor was conducted to him, and he required always to have the name so distinctly pronounced that he could hear it. He received every visitor with a dig-nified bow, while his hands were so disposed as to indicate that the salutation was not to be accompanied with shaking hands. As the visitors came in they formed a circle around the room. At a quarter past three the door wa always closed, and the circle was formed for that day. He then began on the right, and spoke to each visitor, calling him by name, and exchanging a few words with him. When he had completed his circuit of the room, he resumed his first position, and the visitors approached him in succession, bowed, and retired. By four o'clock in the evening the levee curious fact, which he had from Lear (Washington's Private Secretary). When the President went to New York, he resisted for three veeks the efforts to introduce levees. At length he yielded, and left it to Humphreys, and some others, to settle the forms. Accordingly an nte-chamber and presence-room were pro vided, and when those who were to pay their court were assembled, the President set out, preceded by Humphreys. After passing through the ante-chamber, the door of the inner room was thrown open, and Humphreys en-tered first, calling out, with a loud voice, 'The President of the United States.' The President was so much disconcerted with it that he did not recover from it the whole time of the levee, and when the company was gone, he said to Humphreys, 'Well, you have taken me in once, but, by God, you shall never take me in a sec-

The reputation this excellent medicine enjoys, is derived from its cures, many of which are truly marvellous. Inveterate cases of Scrotulous disease, where the system seemed saturated with corruption, have been corruption, have been purified and cured by it. Scrofulous affections and

NO. 137.

Scrofulous affections and disorders, which were agravated by the scrofulous contamination until they were painfully afflicting, have been radically cured in such great numbers in almost every section of the country, that the public scarcely need to be informed of its virtues or uses.

Scrofulous poison is one of the most destructive enemies of our race. Often, this unseen and urfelt tenant of the organism undermines the constitution, and invites the attack of enfeebling or fatal diseases, without exciting a suspicion of its presence. Again, it seems to breed infection throughout the body, and then, on some favorable occasion, rapidly develop into one or other of its hideous forms, either on the surface or among the vitals. In the latter, tubercles may be suddenly deposited in the lungs or heart, or tumors formed in the liver, or it shows its presence by eruptions on the skin, or foul ulcerations on some part of the body. Hence the occasional use of a bottle of this Sarsaparilla is advisable, even when no active symptoms of disease appear. Persons afflicted with the following complaints generally find immediate relief, and, at length, cure, by the use of this SARSAPARILLA. St. Anthony's Fire, Rose or Erysipelas, Tetter, Salt Rheum, Scald Head, Ringworm, Sore Eyes, Sore Ears, and other eruptions or visible forms of Scrofulous disease. Also in the more concealed forms, as Dyspepsia, Dropsy, Heart Disease, Fits, Epilepsy, Neuralgia, and the various Ulcerous affections of the muscular and neryous systems.

Syphilis or Veneral and Mercurial Diseases are cured by it, though a long time is required for subduing these obstinate maladies by any medicine. But long continued use of this medicine will cure the complaint. Leucorrhæa or Whites, Uterine Ulcerations, and Female Diseases, are commonly soon relieved and ultimately cured by its purifying and invigorating effect. Minute Directions for each case are found in our Almanac, supplied gratis. J STODDARD JOHNSTON. Editor.

THURSDAY _____AUGUST 10, 1871.

The news has gone from Frankfort that from the county jail, and hung by a mob; it condemns: and, again, on all sides, is our community and the State held up to reproach. We have no lawlessness and barbarism contemplated by the actors. We are of the number who believe that mob law and violence are wrong unable to afford? and not to be justified by any enlightened and have never failed to express it, even in the face of greatest danger. We care not what the is nothing more than the organization, under eral rule. the forms of law, of the better elements over the worse, whom laws are made to restrain at peace, life and property are secure, and it at the head of the column. While it is true virtue prevails over crime. Just in propor | that Leslie's majorities are smaller in these tion as these provisions for the peace and counties than these received by Gov. Unfortunately men are not all so consti tuted, either to preserve the force of these reflections, or, recognizing them, to shape their action accordingly. Human passion roused to fury reasons little, or when it does it is distempered, and prone to evil; and so in viewing the bloody tragedy which has so lately occurred in our community, we must atply this theory to the facts preceding the Leslie's gain 375 bloody work so as to account for-not to excuse--its commission.

By calling out the militia ranged by the late treaty negotiated at Washcompany this was checked, and at midnight ington. the Mayor of the city regarded the public peace sufficiently secure to dispense with their services; but this proved delusive; for in two hours thereafter the crowd which had withdrawn from the streets, entered the town quietly, and, proceeding to the jail, took from it the negro charged with the rape, and another wounded in the disturbance at the polls, believed to have fired the shots which killed Gilmore and Bishop, and hung them just beyond the city limits. It was an act for which the community will come in for much censure, but it is difficult to see how any precaution could have prevented it. It was one of those occasions, such as in the hanging of the brutal father in Illinois recently for killing his son, when men unite at short notice with such desperate determination, and in such numbers, that the power is not at hand, and time is not given to organize for resistance. There will as usual be censure of the company of State militia, that small but faithful body of young men, who never fail to respond whenever called to guard their size would have availed; and we even doubt whether the two companies of Federal troops, which were under arms within less than half a mile of the court-house, could have been effective in preventing the deed. It is easy for those writing at a distance to denounce both the mob and the community, and to say what ought to have been done, or what ought now to be done; but if they had been here—especially those of the Radical stripe, who, in effect, justify the killing of the two unarmed white men at the polls with no word of rebuke to the perpetrators, while they speak sympathetically of the brutal ravisher as a poor, helpless colored man, and a victim to the teachings of Democratic speeches in the last canvass-they would have declined, as did their fellows here, to lift a finger in behalf of the law. To them the condition of affairs, under whatever provocation, is highly gratifying; and when the Louisville Commercial in its issue yesterday, after basing its account of the proceedings here on a most false and perverted statement of a nameless correspondent, utters the following sentiment. It speaks more as if in exultation at the consummation of the Radical on Tuesday night, two negroes were taken hope than in deprecation of the state of things

THE SEQUEL OF THE RIOF-IWO NEGROES

HUNG. In our last we gave an account of the riot which occurred after the closing of the polls at the Market-house precinct in this city, on Monday night, bringing our report to the hour of midnight. At that time the city was quiet, and the Mayor, who had placed the company of militia on duty, deeming their presence no longer necessary to a preservation of the peace, dismissed them. Between half-past one and two o'clock, however, a large body of men, variously estimated at from three to five hundred, entered the city by various approaches, and proceeding to the jail, captured the jailer. They then took from the jail Harry Johnson, the negro charged with rape, and Henry Washington, who had been wounded in the riot, and, proceeding to the other side of the river, hung them to a tree, just beyond the residence of Judge Drane, where the Shelby turnpike turns up the hill. Next morning the bodies were taken in charge by the Coroner, who proceeded to hold an inquest, when the jury returned the following verdict:

STATE OF KENTUCKY, FRANKLIN COUNTY, Sct.

An inquisition taken at Frankfort, in the county aforesaid, the 8th day of August, 1871, before me, John R. Graham, Coroner of the Commonwealth for the county aforesaid, duly commissioned and qualified according to law, upon the view of the bodies of Henry Washington and Harrison Johnson, late of said county, then and there lying deal, and upon the oaths of good and lawful men, of the county aforesaid, who, being sworn and charged to inquire upon the part of said Com nonwealth when, where, and how, and after want man-ner, the said Henry Washington and Harrison Johnson came to their deaths, do say, upon their oath, that they were hanged by the neck until dead on the morning of the 8th August, 1871, in South Frankfort, by parties disguised and unknown to this jury.
We also find upon the person of Henry

A REVIEW .- The battle has been fought, and the result fixed. And as the excitement of the campaign dies away we may look calmly over the field and estimate the forces and combinations which tended to determine the issue. We may write now without any bias, for nothing can be effected by what we say.

Though the returns are too meager to enable We publish the official returns from a few yet we know, of a certainty, that the whole Democratic State ticket has been elected; and that a very large majority of Democrats will compose both branches of the next Legislature. to the perfect organization of the enemy, and the entire want of it upon the part of the Capt. (From the Lexington Press.)

The result of the election held on Monday last bears with it a lesson which it would be well for the Democracy of Kentucky to heed. Years of unquestionable supremacy has had its demoralizing effect upon our party. Political organizations like governments are enervated and enfeebled by too uninterrupted a career of prosperity.

and the assured triumph of its candidates introduces into a party elements of disintegraination by their party is equivalent to election longer so pressing as to force recognition. Discontented or officious men seek opportunities to show a counterfeit independence by warring upon their party, satisfied that there is no danger of a closing up of the party ranks which will leave them out as disorganizers, and no choice but to go over to the enemy. The Democracy of Kentucky has felt the full force recognize the necessity of thorough reorganiza-tion and reform. Imprudent because of an overwhelming majority, or apathetic and careless by reason of tormer victories so easily and triumphantly won, we have felt that even any approach to a defeat was a matter of impossibility; the voice of warning has been laughed to scorn as the croakings of timidity; and ambitious aspirants have looked for advancement rather to their own individual strength than to the aggregate power wielded by the organization to which they owe anything of prom inence they may possess. "New Departures,' personal and political, which are calculated to force their advocates into alluring notoriety have led the Democracy away from the old, simple, and rigid faith. While we cannot but feel humiliation and regrets over the results of the late election, we recognize the salutary influence which they will exert over the Democracy of our State. The medicine has been nauseous, but we are assured it will be effective. The day of unreliable politicians and selfish aspirants is past. Our party has tasted the bitter fruits of following the counsels of those unfit to lead, who base their claim for leadership upon a fancied popularity with our op- siderable. of our opponents. [From the Lexington Observer and Reporter.]

As usual after elections, we are favored with a variety of theories to explain our defeat, and with an equal number of suggestions to prevent a recurrence of defeat, in the future. Some of our friends are disposed to think that the colored troops did not do their devoir quite so nobly as we had the right to expect. Others are of the opinion that the white voters did not come to the polls with that unanimity and enthusiasm which some times prevent defeat. Others are inclined to the view that the Democrats of the county fell reprehensibly short of yielding the support and the assured triumph of its candidates introduces into a party elements of disintegration which it requires the sharp revulsion of defeat to counteract; personal prejudice, and defeat to counteract; personal prejudice and prepossessions, individual aspirations, disappointed ambition, and private pique, too often ing candidates, corruption, Radical strategy, control the action of those who feel that nom- Democratic dissenters, etc., etc., etc., all of which brows a great deal of light on the question by the people. The necessity of close organization and strict discipline essential to the success of any popular organization is no

As it softens a fall amazingly if we can explain just how it happened, we may add to these theories the suggestion, which comes from gentlemen of judgment and experience in political affairs, that our defeat was attribueither force them into obedience or give them table chiefly to a want of organization. With complete and thorough organization comes enthusiasm, confidence, power, and conscious of all these evils, and it is time now for us to mastery of the situation. The matchless discipline with which the Democratic party once moved to victory was wholly wanting in the recent contest; and the only perceptible indication that the ancient spirit was still alive was brought out on the day of election, when, t must be admitted, the city Democracy seemed to realize the full requirements of the situation. They fought with a steadiness, vigor, and efficiency that, manifested early in the contest, would have insured us a victory as splendid as our actual overthrow was complete.

> (From the Louisville Courier-Jourgal.) THE KENTUCKY ELECTION.

The Republicans have been disappointed in heir hopes with respect to the vote in Kentucky. In spite of the great personal popu-larity of Gen. Harlan, joined to a wide spread apathy among the Democratic masses, result is a solid and overwhelming defeat. There are some gains. In a contest of the sort it would be strange if there should be none. But such as there are do not respond to the calculations of the Republican managers and are in fact unimportant and incon ponents, rather than upon the undivided and enthusiastic support of their own party. Compromise, conciliation, a milk and water policy, have borne their legitimate fruits. Next year the National Democratic Convention will adopt and crystalize the whole, and there will no longer be a loop-hole for the escape of the most ultra of the impracticables, except that which leads directly into the Radical camp.

Now we want to see Kentucky take her proper place in this movement, and not lag behind it, and so, we shall continue to fight for that end, trusting the issue to results and the common sense of the people. If those of our local readers who make war on us choose to array themselves against the union of such forces as these, they will do so at their own risk, and must not charge their discomfiture on us, for, we repeat, we seek the injury of none, are interested in none of the factions of the commonwealth to be affixed. OBITUARY.

Mrs. ELIZA PALMER ADAIR, relict of the late Thomas B. Monroe, Ex-Judge of the Federal Court of Kentacky, died at the residence of her son-inlaw, H. J. Leovy. Esq., on the 25th of July, 1871, at the ripe age of 81 years.

The death of this estimable lady, whose pure and Christlan life should be an example to queen or peasant, demands a more permanent record than the ephemeral notice that summoned her friends to her last obsequies. She was born in Mercer county, Kentucky, in the latter part of the last century, about the time when our Government emerged from revolution and took its place among the nations of the earth. Her father, Gen. Adair, commanded the Kentucky troops at New Orleans, under Jackson, and the Louisiana Legislature passed a resolution of thanks "to Gen. Adair and other generals, for the valiant share they have had in the defense of this country, and the happy harmony they have maintained with the inhabitants and militia of the State." He became Governor of, and United States Senatorfrom, Kentucky, and his name and fame have a ways remained among the cherished treasures of the State.

Senator from, Kentucky, and his name and tame have a ways remained among the cherished treasures of the State.

Sprung from such distinguished blood and reared in the early days of the Republic, Mrs. Monroe illustrated, through her life, the purity and virtues of her times and ancestry. Cheerful, without frivoilty, intelligent and instructive without pedantry, hospitable and dignified to rich and poor alke, she passed through her long life without making lan enemy or altenating a friend. She possessed the power of winning old and young to listen to her and to love her. Never was anything said to leave a sting, and no one went from her presence unaffected by the amiability and in elligence for which she was so distinguished. She was a true and practical Christian, free from all undue pride, ostentation, or prejudice. As life wore on, her feelings, her faculties, and her nice sense of right and justice, were all preserved to the end, so that in the midst of her large family of old and young, she had never became a burden or caused them a single sorrow, and she was mourned for, as if the sands of life and not yet ran out. She as embled her children and grand-children by her bedside, conversed cheerfull upon her departure to a better world, and bade them cease weeping, for she felt no fear and knew that all was well. She spoke of seeing the dear ones, who had gone to the Spirat Land, fresh from the fields of battle and glory. She blessed them living with her daing breath, and slept in the consciousness of a Lappy resurrection and of full faith in Jesus.

The Origin of Chess.

The game is said to have had its origin in the fifth century, at the court of a powerfu-prince in the Indies, who had forced a great number of sovereigns to pay tribute to him, and submit to his government. Forgetting that a king ought to be the father of his peo ple, he grievously oppressed them, and put to death those who dared to remonstrate with death those who dared to remonstrate with him, till the people, borne down by a weight of unsupportable tyranny, began to revolt, and the tributary principles, persuaded that in losing the love of his people he had lost the essence of his power, were preparing to throw off the yoke, and to carry war into his estates. At length a Brahmin, or Indian Philosopher, named Sissea, the son of Daher, touched with the misfortunes of his country, undertook to make the prince open his eyes to the fatal effects which his conduct was likely to produce. But, instructed by the example of those who had gone before him, he was sensible his lesson would not prove of any service until the prince should make the application of it to himself, and not think it was not done by With this view he invented the game of chess, where the king, although the most considerable of the pieces, is both impotent to attack, as well as to defend himself against his enemies, without the assistance of his subjects and soldiers. The new game soon became famous; the King of the Indies heard of it and would learn it. The Brahmin Sissea was pitched upon to teach him; and under the pretext of explaining the rules of the game, and showing him the skill required to make use of the other pieces for the king's defense, he made him perceive and relish important truths which he had hitherto refused to hear. The king, convinced that in the people's love of the ruler consisted all his strength, altered his conduct, and prevented the mistortunes that threatened him.

Happy Retort.

The late Professor Duncan, of St. Andrew's University, in Scotland, was, prior to his ap-pointment to his chair, rector to an academy pointment to his chair, rector to an academy in Forfarshire. He was particularly reserved in his intercourse with the fair sex, but, in the prospect of obtaining a professorable with the fair sex, but, in the prospect of obtaining a professorable with the fair sex, but, in the prospect of obtaining a professorable with the fair sex, but, in the prospect of obtaining a professorable with the fair sex, but, in the prospect of obtaining a professorable with the fair sex, but, in the prospect of obtaining a professorable with the fair sex, but, in the prospect of obtaining a professorable with the fair sex, but, in the prospect of obtaining a professorable with the fair sex, but, in the prospect of obtaining a professorable with the fair sex, but, in the prospect of obtaining a professorable with the fair sex, but, in the prospect of obtaining a professorable with the fair sex, but, in the prospect of obtaining a professorable with the fair sex, but, in the prospect of obtaining a professorable with the fair sex, but, in the prospect of obtaining a professorable with the fair sex, but, in the prospect of obtaining a professorable with the fair sex, but, in the prospect of obtaining a professorable with the fair sex, but, in the prospect of obtaining the professorable with the fair sex, but, in the prospect of obtaining the professorable with the fair sex, but, in the professorable with the fair sex and the professorable with the professorable with the fair sex and the professorable with the p prospect of obtaining a professorship, ventured to make proposals to a lady. They were walk ing together, and the important question was put without a sentiment or note of warning. Of course the lady replied by a gentle "No The subject was immediately dropped, but the parties soon met again.
"Do you remember," at length said the lady, "the question you put to me when we last met?"

The Professor said that he remembered. "And do you remember my answer, Mr Duncan?"

"Oh, yes," said the professor.
"Well, Mr. Duncan," proceeded the lady, "I have been led, on consideration, to change my

Some plodding genius has discovered. while spending his own time, that the word time itself, when artificially transposed, or metagrammatized, will form the following words: Meti, emit, item. And if the afore named and its anagrams be placed in following quadratic position, they will form what may be termed an anagrammatic palindrome:

TIME ITEM EMIT

This word, time, is the only word in the English language which can be thus arranged; and the different transpositions are all, at the same time, Latin words. These words in English, as well as in Latin, may be read either upward or downward. The English words time, item, meti, and emit-to send forth-are mentioned above; and of the Latin ones--first, time signifies fear thou; second, item, likewise; third, meti, to be measured; fourth, emit, he buys.

It seems that the ladies at Long Branch have got up a mania for billiards, which thus accounted for by a correspondent of the lay 7 P. M. Graceful women grow gracefuller and none other should attempt to play Sleeves will fall beck, 'loose sleeves are so un manageable,' assert the players, with a pout of red lips and shrug of pretty, plump shoulders, but they must wear them because they are the fashion, and round white arms show never to so good advantage as when they have for relief the dark back-ground of the green braize-covered table, and supple waists and pretty figures are numberless times prettier when assuming some new position for playing. Technical terms lose half their masculine hardness when spoken by feminine lips, and abbecome the sweetest music if those lips are temptingly pretty. The gentlemen enter into the game with a keener relish and added zest. There is nothing like novelty to revive enthusiasm, and there is something deliciously enchanting playing in teacher to a bewitching little girl who turns the soundest head with her bewildering eyes, and leads the most obdurate, flinty heart captive, with a brush of her golden race horse Eclipse are published by the Turf, Field and Farm:

The celebrated race horse Eclipse, foaled April 1, 1764, was one of the most remarkable animals that ever struck the turf with his feet. Mr. O'Kelly purchased him for $3,750, and it is estimated that the horse won for his owner more than $125,000 in gold cups, vases and guinea purses, when he died of colic and in flamation. Mr. Plumer, a son of Sir Thomas Plumer, the former owner of the estate of Canons, writes: "The horse Eclipse was buried in Powder, and Patent Safety Fuse always on hand. the park, rot far from what is called the saloon front of the house and there was a stone which marked the spot; but in the extensive altera-tion which my father made, the stone, I think, got removed, although the spot where it was is well known to me, and is known to me now, and I shall be pleased to offer my services as chaperon to point it out.

"The skin of Eclipse was preserved in the range of stables, and I well remember its mouldering, dusty, moth-eaten remains, which I am ashamed to say were suffered to decay and gradually vanish from sight and memory. The hoof, however, was set in silver and pre-served by my eldest brother, whose son now has it. The estate of Canons was won by Eclipse for the equally famous Col. Kelly, of whom my father bought the place for $60,-

Eclipse was sired by Marslake, and his dam was Spiletta, by Regulus. He died at Canons, where he was buried with almost regal honors. The Challenge Whip was made from his tail, and each treasured among his collection a hoof of the horse mounted in silver.
